

Jo Ann J. Macrina

Commissioner

City of Atlanta Department of Watershed Management

Atlanta, GA

Appointed Commissioner of the Department of Watershed Management for the City of Atlanta by Mayor Kasim Reed in April 2011, Jo Ann Macrina is committed to delivering excellent customer service; providing quality drinking water, protecting and improving our water resources; complying with federal and state regulations, promoting teamwork and accountability, building partnerships, and creating a safe and enjoyable work environment.

With over 25 years of experience in the area of Water Resources, Ms. Macrina has worked both in the public and private sectors, managing departments as well as projects and programs. Her work has focused on total water management (stormwater, drinking water, and wastewater). She has also worked in the transportation arena as well as residential and commercial development.

Ms. Macrina holds a BS in Civil Engineering from the University of Texas and a MPA from the University of South Florida. She was appointed by Governor Perdue to be on his Stakeholder Advisory Board for Erosion and Sedimentation Control in Georgia, which she has served since 2004 and she is a member of the Chattahoochee River Basin Advisory Council. Ms. Macrina currently serves as President of the American Society of Civil Engineers for the state of Georgia and was awarded Engineer of the Year in 2006. Her professional affiliations have also included the American Water Resources Association (AWRA) Georgia Chapter (served as President 2002-2004), Georgia Water & Pollution Control Association Board of Directors, and the Gwinnett-Fulton County Junior League. Ms. Macrina received several project awards for environmental excellence.
